Sunday Reflection

Fr. Ed Smith

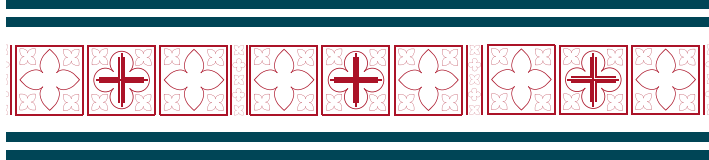

Acts 10:25-26, 34-35, 44-48; 1 John 4:7-10; John 15:9-17

Three dramatic scenes are presented to us in this weekend's readings: 1. Peter at the house of the centurion Cornelius [Acts]; 2. John the Evangelist speaking to the early Christians about why God sent His son into the world [1 John]; 3. Jesus teaching His disciples to love one another as He loves us [Gospel]. In each of these scenes it is clear that the movement of our conversion, our growth in love and our ultimate transformation begins with God, not with us.

The reality is that God initiates the best in us, and that He offers a life of meaning that would not be possible without Him in the first place. In fact, God IS the first place. He is the origin of who we are and what we can become. He is intimately involved in our own lives, calling us to live as His faithful children. He is the destiny we hope for: a life united with Him forever in heaven.

When we reflect, therefore, on the most basic questions of life, it is only our faith that provides answers that make sense. If we ask: "Who am I? Why am I here? Where am I going?" It is our faith [outlined in today's readings] that responds: "I am a child of God. I was created out of God's love. I am called to eternal happiness with God in Paradise." There is nothing more dramatic than this. God is our origin, our history, and our goal. This is the basis of all life. And Christian believers are the lucky ones who realize it!

Creeds Unveiled: Tracing the Origins and Differences Between the Nicene and Apostles' Creeds

At every Sunday Mass, we recite the Nicene Creed. Since the Nicene Creed was formulated during two ecumenical church councils, the council of Nicaea in 325 AD and the Council of Constantinople in 381 AD, we have much documentation on how and why it came to be. But, what about the Apostles' Creed...where did it come from? Why is it different? Did the Apostles sit down together and knock it out over lunch one day? Let's see.

Like a tall tale or the story of how that big fish got away, the legend that the twelve Apostles wrote the Apostles' Creed started being told after the Apostles themselves were long gone. The legend says that since the Apostles' Creed has twelve articles or statements, each Apostle wrote a portion of the creed, except, by then Judas had already betrayed Jesus, so there were only eleven Apostles left. Hmmm?

We see the earliest form of the Apostles' Creed in 215 AD, written by Hippolytus of Rome, a renowned theologian in the early Church. It wasn't written to be recited at Mass, but to be used as part of the rite of Baptism in the early Church. The one to be baptized either recited the entire Apostles' Creed or was asked the beliefs in the Creed in the form of a question, as we often hear during the Easter Season. For instance,

"Do you believe in God the Father, almighty, creator of heaven and earth?"
Answer: "I do".

The early church was for the most part illiterate, so Christians couldn't read theological writings or the catechism the way we can now. Having an easily memorized way to profess their faith provided both a way to learn the basic tenets of the faith and to express them. The Apostles Creed united Christians around the world by summarizing true and essential elements of the faith and helping to fight against heresies. In fact, it was in response to the Arian Heresy, that the Church gathered at the Council of Nicaea to further define what the Catholic Church believed, especially regarding Jesus' divinity.

The word creed comes from the Latin "credo", which means "I Believe". Do we believe more than the statements or articles contained in the Apostles' Creed or the Nicene Creed? Of course, we do.... like we believe everyone has a Guardian Angel, that the Pope is the head of the Church, and that Jesus is truly present in the Eucharist. Those aren't in the creed. A creed is not a comprehensive statement of everything we believe, but rather an essential summary rooted in the Holy Trinity. Imagine reciting the entire Catechism at Mass rather than the Nicene Creed. That would take a while.

The Apostles Creed does have two articles that are not included in the Nicene Creed. The phrase "He descended into Hell" and "I believe in ... the Communion of Saints". Hell, here is of course not the place of the eternally damned, which comes from the Hebrew word Gehenna, but rather Hades, which is the place where those who were righteous, and died before Christ, waited to be redeemed. The Communion of Saints refers to our belief that the Church is one united body, those on earth (Church Militant), those in purgatory (Church Suffering) and those in Heaven (Church Triumphant). The brevity of the Apostles Creed is what most likely helped attach it to devotions like the Rosary and the Divine Mercy Chaplet.

The next time someone asks you what you believe, you can honestly say:

I believe in God,
the Father almighty, Creator of heaven and earth,
and in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord,
who was conceived by the Holy Spirit,
born of the Virgin Mary,
suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, died and was buried;
he descended into hell;
on the third day he rose again from the dead;
he ascended into heaven,
and is seated at the right hand of God the Father almighty;
from there he will come to judge the living and the dead.

I believe in the Holy Spirit,
the holy catholic Church,
the communion of saints,
the forgiveness of sins,
the resurrection of the body,
and life everlasting.

Amen.

As I Love You

This week my children were learning about energy. We set up an experiment with toy cars – one was placed in front of another, and a third was pushed into the two stationary ones.

The forward motion caused the front car to move, but not much. “Most of the energy goes into the car in the middle, not the car on the end,” my daughter concluded.

I asked her why she seems to have so much energy, and I seem to have so little.

“Because you’re old,” she replied confidently.

Most days I feel like that first car, barreling at life with all my energy and love and good intentions, only to have it almost entirely absorbed by the proverbial middle car. It’s so easy to be discouraged. The devil so badly wants us to feel discouraged.

But the law of love is not unlike the law of conservation of energy. Love is neither created nor destroyed. It is only transferred from one form to another. And yes, sometimes it certainly seems like it disappears. It appears to get lost between my hands and the plate of dinner that goes uneaten or evaporates off of my lips as words I fear are never heard. It is spat upon as a commandment the world would prefer I do not keep.

But we are not called to simply love one another – to love when it seems effective and productive and appreciated. We are called to love as Christ loved: recklessly, selflessly, and yes, even without logic. We are called to love with a love that doesn’t give up and is never withdrawn. A love that doesn’t fear death or the world’s hatred. A love that stands willing to argue, to be reviled, to be dismissed.

We are called to be that first car, hurtling ourselves against a world that isn’t ready to accept or understand us. And we trust that, even when we can’t see how, the love that seems to disappear simply changes forms.

Everyday Stewardship

Choosing to Love One Another

Love one another. The greatest commandment, the simplest commandment – and if you’ve ever loved anyone, you know it’s also the hardest.

I’m man enough to admit it. I’ve seen one or two of those cheesy Hallmark movies that are especially popular around the holidays. Boy meets Girl. Boy and Girl encounter a catastrophic roadblock to their relationship – they’re coaches of rival high school volleyball teams, or he runs a dog kennel and she works at a feline rescue, so it could never, ever work out, right? But sprinkle a little movie magic over the whole situation and Boy and Girl find what Hallmark tells us is true love.

I could make a list of all the things that are inaccurate about these movies, and something I would put right near the top – maybe even above the sometimes-unbelievable storylines – is the idea that love is a feeling.

See, I’m not sure if it’s accurate to call these movies love stories. Attraction stories, sure. But if you’ve ever forgiven someone who’s hurt you, nursed a dying parent, gotten up for an infant’s night feeding or let your kid have the last piece of cake, you know that real love is a verb. It’s something you do. And it is almost always a choice.

Love one another. How often do we hear this? How often do we think about what it really means? How often do we take a moment to consider the action Jesus is asking us to take and the choice he is asking us to make?

Prayer of Fruitfulness

God in Heaven,
Your grace surrounds us every day as we seek to live and move and grow in You. Prune the spaces in our lives that distract us from You! Plant Your word more deeply within us!
Amen.
